

Ascertaining the Scope of Delegated Power of Civil Agency and its Limitations

Tzu-Chiang Chen

Abstract

That the nature of civil agency differs from commercial agency has long been ignored by Taiwan's civil law scholars. This article first intends to formulate a theory to identify the scope of delegated power of civil agency and its limitations. It is followed with the analysis and comparison of the commercial agency, such as managers.

Keywords: Civil agency, commercial agency